Interview with Diane Rapoport

Diane Rapoport is an author and editor, known for her work in the science fiction and fantasy genres. She has written several novels and short stories that have been published in various anthologies and periodicals. In this interview, Rapoport talks about her latest release, a novel titled "The Last Light of Eden," and discusses her writing process and inspirations.

Q: What inspired you to write "The Last Light of Eden"?

Rapoport: "The Last Light of Eden" was inspired by my fascination with the idea of a distant planet existing in the outer reaches of our solar system, perhaps capable of sustaining life. The concept of exploring such a planet and the challenges it might present to humanity was something I found particularly intriguing. I wanted to explore the themes of discovery, survival, and the human spirit in such a setting.

Q: What is your writing process like?

Rapoport: My writing process is quite organic. I usually start with a concept or idea and then let the story develop from there. I write in short bursts and rely on my imagination to fill in the gaps. I often revise and edit as I go, which can sometimes be a challenge, but it keeps the story fresh and engaging.

Q: What are some of your favorite authors and books?

Rapoport: Some of my favorite authors include Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, J.R.R. Tolkien, and Ursula K. Le Guin. Their work has had a profound influence on my writing, especially in terms of world-building and character development. Books like "The Lord of the Rings" and "The Left Hand of Darkness" have inspired me to explore different perspectives and cultures in my stories.

Q: Do you have any advice for aspiring writers?

Rapoport: My advice for aspiring writers is to read widely and often. Exposing yourself to different styles and genres can help you develop your own unique voice. Also, don't be afraid to fail. Writing is a process, and it takes time and practice to get it right. Finally, seek out feedback and support from other writers, as this can be invaluable in your development as an author.

New Releases from Etymus

Etymus Press is proud to present two new releases: "Poems and Their Making" and "The Last Light of Eden." "Poems and Their Making" is a collection of poems written by various poets, each accompanied by their own reflections on the writing process. "The Last Light of Eden" is a novel by Diane Rapoport, as discussed in the interview above.

Poems and Their Making is available now as an e-book, with print and audiobook formats coming soon. The book features poems by a diverse group of poets, each with their own unique perspective and style. "The Last Light of Eden" will be released soon in print and e-book formats. Pre-orders are available now on our website.

About Etymus Press

Etymus Press is an independent publisher dedicated to promoting new and emerging voices in literature. Our mission is to provide a platform for writers who may not have access to traditional publishing avenues. We believe in the power of storytelling to connect people and foster understanding. Visit our website to learn more about our authors and upcoming releases.